Questions

1. If married, think back to the time when you first got married? Were your motives primarily self-centered or other-centered? What do you think the answer would be for most men in our culture today?
2. Are there stresses in your life or marriage that tend to contribute to you having a bad attitude? What are they?
3. Which aspect of today's marriage is hardest for you to implement in your relationships – to hear, to cherish, or to serve? Why?
4. “God asks us to glorify Him by sacrificially loving others.” Does this statement characterize your relationships and/or marriage? Why or why not?
