Questions

1. Do you have confidence that you hold the actual words of God in your hands? If not, what are your doubts and concerns?
2. We're looking at the Bible from 12 different angles. Today's perspective is that the Bible is "a completely reliable, authoritative, and inerrant guide for all matters of faith and life, increasingly, sovereignly, and graciously translated into the native tongue of all mankind because that is what the Great Commission requires." What do you like about this perspective? What gives you pause?
3. What can be the practical impact of believing that you hold the actual words of God in your hands when the walls cave in?
